EXPERT WEBINAR

Don't Just Survive, Thrive: A Fireside Chat with Michelle Holliday

How to find the clarity, creativity and courage to “be the change” the world needs your organization to be

Join Michelle Holliday and getAbstract for a discussion on how leaders can cultivate thriving organizations amid change. As you navigate increasing challenge and complexity, you can find clarity in a simple yet powerful set of “universal design principles” found in all living systems, including organizations. And by aligning with life in this way, you can unlock the motivation and the means for people to collaborate and innovate at the levels required.

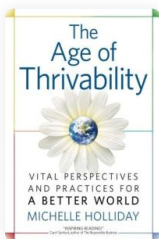

You will learn:

1. The four fertile conditions that must be cultivated if any organization is to thrive and to contribute to thriving in the world
2. Why stewardship is your most powerful role, what it means, and what it involves
3. The crucial conversations you need to be having with your team and with key stakeholders

Michelle Holliday is a visionary author, facilitator, consultant and researcher. For the past two decades, her work has centered around “thrivability” — a set of perspectives and practices based on an understanding of organizations as dynamic living systems. On this foundation, she accompanies organizations through change, designs and facilitates strategic gatherings, and delivers talks and workshops. In these ways, she works across multiple sectors to enable the transition to a more regenerative, life-aligned world.
